

HEARING THINGS

There's so many sounds
I have to say
I wonder how many sounds
I can hear today?

Can I hear a butterfly
When it flaps its wings?
Can I hear a raindrop
Before it hits anything?
Can I hear worm
As it digs in the ground?
Can I hear the sky?
Can I hear the clouds?

Can I hear giraffe
When it plays hide and seek?
Can I hear a jellyfish
If it were to sneeze?
Can I hear an ant
If it tiptoes in the room?
Can I hear a flower
The first time it blooms?

Can I hear a bubble
As it floats through the air?
Can I hear a candle
As its flames flicker there?
Can I hear an apple
As it still hangs upon a tree?
Can I hear a picture
After it's been drawn by me?

Can I hear a feather
As it floats down from the sky?
Can I hear an astronaut
If they were to look down and say hi?
Can I hear a rabbit
If it quickly wiggles its nose?
Can I hear a centipede
If it quickly wiggles its toes?

Can I hear the world turn
If I'm standing very still?
Can I hear an ice cube melt?

Or a flea if it is ill?
Can I hear a rainbow
With its colors so bright?
Can I hear the dark?
Can I hear the light?

Can I hear my eyelashes move
When I close my eyes to blink?
Can I hear my many thoughts
In my head each time I think?
Can I hear smile
When I put one on my face?
Can I hear my frown
When I'm not doing all that great?

Can I hear tomorrow
Before it becomes today?
Can I hear the universe
A million miles away?

There's so many sounds
I have to say
I wonder how many sounds
I can hear today?
