

FACELESS

DEAR Darling, have you seen my face? I seem to have misplaced it.
DARLING When did you last see it, darling?
DEAR I had it on last night, darling. Just before I went to bed. I feel rather silly really.
DARLING Yes. This isn't the first time you've lost your face, darling.
DEAR No, darling. And us with company coming over.
DARLING True, darling. It is hard to be a good host when one is faceless.

SFX: Doorbell.

DARLING Oh dear, darling. It seems our guests have arrived. We shall have to hope that they don't notice.

SFX: Door opens.

GUEST 1 Hello, darling. You have no face.
DARLING They noticed.
DEAR Is it that obvious, darling?
DARLING There is a noticeable lacking at the front of your head, darling.
GUEST 1 I'm sorry, darlings. Did I say something wrong when I said you had no face?
DEAR Don't be preposterous, darling. You're absolutely right in saying I have no face. Most people would not be so bold. I consider you a true friend for feeling comfortable enough to hurt me.

For the entire skit contact me at me@johnmcgie.com.