

GIVE ME ALL THE MONEY

TELLER
ROBBER
MANAGER
GUARD

---

TELLER Good afternoon, sir. How might I serve you?
ROBBER Lightly grilled with a bit of parsley.
TELLER I beg your pardon?
ROBBER Never mind. I'd like to withdraw some money please.
TELLER Certainly sir. How much?
ROBBER All of it.
TELLER All of it?
ROBBER All of it.
TELLER Can I have your account number then, please?
ROBBER Certainly. I don't have an account.
TELLER No account?
ROBBER I just want all the money.
TELLER Oh, I see. You're robbing the bank?
ROBBER That's right.
TELLER Terribly sorry. Should have seen it earlier.
ROBBER Quite all right.
TELLER No.
ROBBER I beg your pardon?
TELLER No. You can't have all the money.
ROBBER Why not?
TELLER Because we wouldn't have any left. It's hard to be a bank if you don't have any money.
ROBBER Well, this will hardly do. Let me see your manager.
TELLER Certainly sir.
MANAGER Can I help you?
ROBBER I want to all the money.

MANAGER Certainly sir. What's your account number?

TELLER He doesn't have an account.

MANAGER Doesn't have an account?

TELLER He wishes to rob us, sir.

MANAGER What? Without an account? No. I'm afraid not. He can not rob us without an account.

TELLER Would you like to open an account, sir?

ROBBER How do I do that?

TELLER Just fill out these forms.

Scribble scribble.

TELLER You forgot to fill in your postal code, sir.

Scribble scribble.

TELLER Thank you, sir. And how much would you like to deposit?

ROBBER Deposit?

TELLER How much would you like to put in your new account?

ROBBER All I have is five dollars.

TELLER That will do. And if you'll just sign here at the bottom.

Scribble.

TELLER Congratulations, sir. You have just opened a new account with our branch. Here's your toaster.

ROBBER Thank you very much. Can I have all the money now?

TELLER I'm afraid your account is sitting in a deficit position. We couldn't possibly give you all the money while you have an account in poor standing.

ROBBER But how can that be? I just put five dollars in it.

TELLER There is a one-time service charge of ten dollars on all new accounts. You owe us five dollars.

ROBBER How about the toaster? It must be worth five dollars.

TELLER The toaster is hardly worth anything, sir. Do you think we'd give away anything of real value? We're a bank, sir.

ROBBER Well, what am I going to do now?

TELLER We could give you a line of credit. Do you have any assets to secure the loan?

ROBBER Well, I do have my get away car. I own that.

TELLER Is it the one parked outside with the engine running?

ROBBER Yes. That's it.

TELLER We'll give you twenty dollars for it.

ROBBER Twenty dollars?!

TELLER Take it or leave it.

ROBBER Alright. Alright.

TELLER Very good, sir. Sign here here and here.

Scribble scribble.

TELLER You now owe us fifty sixty-five dollars.

ROBBER How can that be?

TELLER Towing charges.

ROBBER What towing charges? Hey, where'd my car go?

TELLER It was parked in a loading zone. The sign clearly states that vehicles will be removed at owner's expense. The towing cost seventy-five dollars. You owed us five dollars. You were approved for fifteen dollars. That makes it sixty-five dollars you owe us.

ROBBER But you said I would get twenty dollars for the car.

TELLER It was damaged during the towing. We took that into account when processing the loan. Is there anything else I can do for you today, sir?

ROBBER No. No thank you. I think I'd best leave while I still have the shirt on my back.

TELLER I'm afraid that too is ours. If you'll read the contract. It's under "I'm a stupid git I've given all my clothes away."

ROBBER All of them?

TELLER It's always best to read before signing, sir.

Strips down.

ROBBER There you go.

TELLER All of them, sir.

ROBBER What? My skivvies too?

TELLER I don't make the rules, sir.

ROBBER This is very poor. Very poor indeed. I shall not be bringing my business to your bank in the future.

TELLER I'm sorry to hear that, sir.

GUARD Kindly come with me, sir.

ROBBER What? Who are you?

GUARD I am the security guard, sir. I don't know where you come from but standing stark naked in the middle of a bank lobby is frowned upon where I come from.

ROBBER But they made me do this!

GUARD They, sir?

ROBBER The bank. They made me take off all my clothes.

GUARD I think that is highly unlikely, sir. In my experience most financial transactions are done while fully clothed.

ROBBER But it's in the contract I signed.

GUARD You signed a contract that requires you to strip down naked in a bank lobby?

ROBBER Apparently yes.

GUARD Do you really want me to believe that, sir?

ROBBER Not really. No.

GUARD There's a good lad. No let's stop making a spectacle of ourselves and comes with me.

TELLER Excuse me, Mr. Green. One of our credit advisers will be contacting you within in the week. What is the best number to reach you at during business hours? We'll be needing a blood sample.

ROBBER Blood sample?

TELLER To help with the organ match.

ROBBER I signed away my organs, did I? Of course I did. Should have seen it coming. The number on the form is probably the best way to reach me.

TELLER Thank you very much, Mr.Green. Have a nice day. And thank you for choosing to bank with us.

Door opens and closes.