

LIVESTOCK BUS

- A Running late, is it?
- B A bit.
- C Excuse me. Can you tell me the time?
- A Just past half 10.
- C It's running a bit late.
- B A bit.
- A Usually it's quite regular.
- B Aye.
- C Funny that.
- B Funny it being late?
- C Aye.
- A Yeah. Funny that.
- B I wonder what could be keeping it?
- C Pigmies.
- A Pigmies?
- C Yeah. This area 's notorious for pigmy problems.
- B People pigmies?
- C Yeah. They picket.
- A The people pigmies picket? Please -
- B Preposterous.
- C Oh yeah? Where's the bus then?
- A Well, what do the pigmies want?
- C They want to ride the bus.
- B Well, why don't they?

- C They don't have the correct change. They keep trying to ram goats and pigs into the coin slots.
- A Couldn't transit appoint a pigmy liaison of some sort to help remedy this problem?
- C They already tried that but the government interceded. The pigmies are protected.
- B The picketing people pigmies of these parts are protected?
- C Apparently.
- A Preposterous.
- B Please.
- C It's a part of preserving the pigmies heritage. Bartering with livestock is a privilege afforded the pigmies since 1974 when the courts upheld the position that the pigmies be viewed as a distinct society. Transit is working on a system that will accept both coin and livestock. They estimate it will cost approximately two billion dollars to implement.
- A Who's going to play for all this?
- C Transit fares are set to increase by 5,000% by the beginning of next month. Transit is saying that the new system will speed up service.
- B How's that?

For the entire skit contact me at me@johnmcgie.com.